NARRATIVE

On March 15, 2025, at approximately 0917 hours, I responded to a reported two-vehicle collision on I-90 eastbound near milepost 142.3 in the city of Chicago. Upon arrival, I observed Vehicle 1 (Swift Logistics Ford Transit van, IL Plate CF-38291) positioned in the center lane behind Vehicle 2 (Toyota Camry, IL Plate AM-74332). Vehicle 2 had been pushed approximately 38 feet forward from the point of impact and had rotated approximately 90 degrees counterclockwise into the right shoulder. Significant rear-end crush damage was observed on Vehicle 2, with airbag deployment on the driver's side. The front bumper and grille assembly of Vehicle 1 were extensively damaged.

I made contact with Driver Webb who was standing outside his vehicle. Driver Webb was alert and oriented, denied injury, and consented to field sobriety evaluation. Standardized field sobriety tests were administered and Webb showed no signs of impairment. Webb stated: 'I was checking the next stop on my nav tablet and when I looked up, traffic had stopped ahead of me. I hit my brakes but there wasn't enough time.' I noted a 10.2-inch tablet (Samsung Galaxy Tab, model SM-T510) mounted on the dashboard console in a dash-mount bracket. The device displayed an active route on the Google Maps application.

Driver Henderson remained inside Vehicle 2 when I arrived. He was conscious but confused and complained of severe neck and lower back pain, headache, and dizziness. CFD Ambulance No. 31 transported Henderson to Rush University Medical Center. I was unable to obtain a full statement from Henderson at the scene.

Witness Maria Chen, a passing motorist, provided a voluntary statement (see attached Witness Statement, Exhibit A). Chen stated she observed the Swift Logistics van traveling at a high rate of speed and failing to slow as traffic ahead decelerated. Chen confirmed she observed the driver looking downward toward the center console area immediately prior to impact.

Based on physical evidence, driver admissions, and witness accounts, I determined Driver Webb (V1) to be the at-fault party. I issued citation No. 2025-T-0481224 for Failure to Reduce Speed to Avoid an Accident (625 ILCS 5/11-601(a)). I additionally documented potential violations of 625 ILCS 5/12-610.2 (electronic communication device use while driving) and forwarded a supplemental report to the Commercial Vehicle Enforcement Unit.
